

REPUBLICAN TURNOUT

Your Vote Is Leverage

Politics does not pause when good citizens stay home. It simply hands their share of the decision to everyone who showed up.

1

Vote

Choose a method and date.

2

Confirm

Track your ballot or verify your location.

3

Multiply

Bring two reliable Republicans with you.

“My vote will not matter.”

Your ballot may not decide a presidential race by itself. It also selects legislators, county officers, judges, school boards, city councils, ballot measures, and party leadership. Local power is often decided by the voters who participate consistently.

“Both candidates disappoint me.”

An election is not a marriage and a ballot is not a declaration that someone is perfect. It is a choice about who receives legal authority for the next term. Compare likely votes, appointments, vetoes, budgets, and governing coalitions.

“I will remember on Election Day.”

Hope is not a vote plan. Put the date on your calendar, verify registration, choose early or Election Day voting, know the location, and decide who needs a reminder or ride.

Make the commitment now. I will vote. I will confirm that my ballot was accepted. I will personally remind at least two Republican voters.

THE BOTTOM LINE

Bad government does not require a majority of bad citizens.
It requires too many good citizens to remain spectators.
